Our mission is to help Princeton students flourish as global citizens, ready to face the challenges posed by an increasingly cosmopolitan and multilingual professional world. We offer:

- A full range of language courses, advanced seminars on literature and culture, translation workshops, and opportunities for independent study
- Talented, supportive faculty who are experts in Spanish and Portuguese languages, literatures, visual arts, music, urban cultures, and the complex political and social histories of the Hispanic and Luso-Afro-Brazilian worlds
- Opportunities for interdisciplinary study in many departments and programs on campus, including:
  - Latin American Studies
  - Global Health
  - PIIRS and Brazil LAB
  - Media and Modernity
  - School of Architecture
  - Comparative Literature
  - Art and Archaeology
  - Environmental Institute

Study Abroad

Spanish and Portuguese (SPO) concentrators and certificate students are encouraged to study abroad during the summer through Princeton in Spain, Princeton in Argentina, and Princeton in Portugal.

Programs feature:

- Intensive and immersive language and culture courses designed and coordinated by Princeton faculty
- Opportunities to stay with host families and interact with local students
- Excursions to historical and natural sites in the area

Find out more at spo.princeton.edu/study-abroad

From our alumni:

Flora Thomson-DeVeaux ’13
In my first weeks at Princeton, I walked into the Spanish and Portuguese Open House on a whim, walked out with a pamphlet on Portuguese classes, and that has made all the difference. Thanks to the curiosity the program sparked and the opportunities it provided, I studied abroad in Toledo, Buenos Aires, and Rio de Janeiro, and traveled up and down the Americas. I recently finished my Ph.D. in Portuguese and Brazilian studies at Brown University, and am now writing, translating, and living in Rio.

Jordan Salama ’19
Concentrating in the Department of Spanish and Portuguese was the best academic decision I’ve made at Princeton. Through trips with the department, I’ve trekked the Andes in Argentina and Bolivia, gone on riverboat expeditions through the Colombian jungle, road-tripped through Cuba and traveled with professors to Spain and Portugal. It is a small department with tremendous resources, where adventures abound, and everyone — professors and students — knows each other like a family.